

Firas R. Yassine, MD, MPH

Firas is a medical doctor and a holder of a Master of Public Health degree with a focus on health policy and management. He has a background in clinical and non-clinical research and has previously worked in the health insurance field. In addition, Firas has worked with several local and international NGOs. He was Vice-President for Public Relations and Communication and then member of the Supervising Council at the International Federation of Medical Students' Associations (IFMSA) and has attended WHO's World Health Assembly as youth delegate twice.

At ISSP, Firas teaches fundamentals of public and global health and research skills, and is a mentor for a handful of students.